

Geraldton to host renewable-powered supercomputing hub

WESTERN Australia's Geraldton is set to become home to one of the world's largest supercomputing hubs as DUG Technologies plans to begin construction in the next quarter.

Future Of Energy > Digitalisation

25 May 2021

Comments

Share

The homegrown company says this will be the world's first carbon-free high-performance computing (HPC) campus powered by renewable energy, with plans to lease 45 hectares of land in Geraldton, Western ge

Reciprocating engines for power generation in the oil and gas sector

SPONSORED

CLARKE ENERGY

SPON

