

Braveheart comes Downunder

DownUnder GeoSolutions celebrated its 10th birthday at the Mounts Bay Sailing club, Friday 29 November, with a highland fling to remember.

The Braveheart theme included a medieval village with axe throwing, wode painting and armoury. There was a re-enactment of the Scottish fighting (and beating) the evil English invaders, such was the result that you'd be excused for believing the centre of the British government is based in Edinburgh.

Guests had the opportunity to load and fire a cross-bow, but not at other guests. As usual, Matt Lamont immersed himself into the theme and was seen running around, with painted face and kilt, screaming at people like a mad Scot.

Pipe bands, Scottish dancing and the amazing, flame-piping Bad Piper entertained the crowds before they feasted from the medieval banquet, catered for by Ultimo and Nunzio's pizza.

Rock legends Darryl Braithwaite and Mental as Anything had guests dancing the night away.

It was the Christmas party of the decade! ■
